

LEE JENKINS

Lee Jenkins is Managing Partner of Atlanta Capital Group, Inc. an independent, full service, investment advisory firm that manages over 500 million dollars of client assets. During his successful 23-year career, Lee has provided financial advice that has been featured numerous times on Atlanta's local television stations and newspapers, as well as in Money Magazine, Gospel Today Magazine and on CNN.

Lee is a proud graduate of the University of Tennessee in Knoxville. After graduation, he was drafted by the New York Giants of the National Football League as a defensive back. When his football career was cut short by injuries, Lee entered the music industry where he served as the Road and Business Manager for the Grammy Award winning gospel group, The Winans. He has also served as business manager for gospel great, Kirk Franklin.

Lee began his career in the investment industry in 1987. Since then, he has reached the level of Vice President of Investments at two major Wall Street firms, Smith Barney and Raymond James & Associates. In early 2000, Lee started his own firm, Jenkins Wealth Advisors, LLC. In 2009 his firm merged with the Atlanta Capital Group.

Outside the office, Lee is a high school football coach, author of three highly successful books, an ordained minister, and the founder and CEO of Lee Jenkins Financial Group, a consulting, education, and ministry outreach organization that teaches people how to manage money from a biblical perspective. Lee is in high demand as a financial speaker and seminar instructor at churches, conferences, and on college campuses throughout the United States.

Lee and his wife Martica, have three children, Kristin, Martin, and Ryan.
